

Rick St. Hilaire resides in Lebanon, NH and has been practicing law since 1993. He is a former prosecutor who served as Grafton County Attorney. Currently, he focuses much of his legal work as Senior Vice President and Deputy General Counsel at a global not-for-profit that is counted among the Fortune 1000 on the delivery of international humanitarian aid to those in need in Ukraine, the Middle East, and Africa.

In addition to litigation, corporate counsel, and international law, Attorney St. Hilaire's diverse legal practice focuses on domestic and transnational cultural heritage law, museum administration and risk management, and combating transnational antiquities crime.

His career in the public sector includes a past White House appointment to the Cultural Property Advisory Committee, where he served two presidential administrations, and an appointment by the Governor and Executive Council in November 2023 to the New Hampshire State Historical Resources Council.

Attorney St. Hilaire frequently lectures at universities and professional societies on the topic of cultural heritage trafficking, and he is the author of the Oxford University Press book chapter titled "Cultural Property Protection in the Context of Counter-Terrorist Financing: An Emerging Legal Paradigm in the United States."

He is a longtime member of the International Foundation for Cultural Property Protection and currently serves on the board of directors of professional societies of archaeologists, including the American Research Center in Egypt and the American Society of Overseas Research.

He holds a Juris Doctor degree from Georgetown University and a Bachelor of Arts degree from Columbia University.
